

Believe is Seeing

by Pen-Woman

Category: How to Train Your Dragon, Rise of the Guardians

Genre: Fantasy, Romance

Language: English

Characters: Hiccup, Jack Frost, Pitch

Pairings: Hiccup/Jack Frost

Status: In-Progress

Published: 2013-07-19 13:01:00

Updated: 2014-09-16 10:34:46

Packaged: 2016-04-26 15:37:14

Rating: T

Chapters: 6

Words: 22,723

Publisher: www.fanfiction.net

Summary: Trying to become noticed is hard. Hiccup has been dealing not being seen all her existence but when a evil threat and the Guardians come after her, it looks like she'll finally get some attention. But it's starting to get a little creepy how that white hair guy keeps staring at her. Odin help her. JackxFem!Hiccup. it's originally belonged to LonelyRedTears & I adopted it.

Rewritten

1. Hiccup Tale

Hiccup Tale

"Talking"

'Talking in Thought'

"YELLING"

'YELLING IN THOUGHT'

Flashback

Born Again

In the star spangled darkness. There is a hint of a beginning, the night's permeating silence. Testifies a temporary lull. Before the earth deliversâ€|Another rebirth!...by Pradip Chattopadhyay.

Disclaimer: I do not own Rise of the Guardians or How to Train Your Dragon because they're all belong to DreamWorks, and also this story was originally belonged to LonelyRedTears, and I happen to request for her to make this story. However, she cannot continue this story for unknown reason and ask me to adopt this story this was requested from me, and I happily accepted. Without further ado let's embark on a journey of a lifetime to the Guardian's next epic adventure, battle, good vs. evil, and romance, enjoy.

* * *

>'Alone. That was the first thing I remember feeling when I woke up.'

A young fifteen year old girl wearing a green shirt and brown vest and fur boots laid in the center of a dark forest. Her green eyes blinked openly, and she sat up from the dead grass ground and saw that she was surrounded by what appeared to be figures of hollow trees.

'It was dark and I was afraid.'

A gush of wind blew by, causing her long reddish brown hair to sway, and gasp as she scooted away when the trees appeared to be reaching out for her with their branches.

'But then suddenly, the light of the moon came to my aid and all my fear drifted away.'

The clouds that covered the sky began to roll away revealing the bright full moon that shined its rays down to the girl showing her that the monsters were just trees. The girl gave let out a sigh of relief, and her lips curved to a small smile before looking up at the moon. A fond smile formed on her lips as a thank you before she felt the breeze of the wind brush past her face.

She closed her eyes and, without thinking or knowing why, a word escaped her lips.

"Dragon." When she reopened them, she saw a pair of bright yellow greens looking into her. She yelled and jumped back. The Dragon startled by her reaction as it tilted his head in question. Then she dropped her fear when she saw that it was not attacking her.

She took a good look at the creature. It was a Dragon, much smaller than most dragons she ever thought about, but still a lot bigger than her, with a smooth black scales and flat looking face and those mesmerizing eyes that she feels drawn to the Dragon's eyes, and those big round pupils made him look cute.

She offered a nervous smile showing her teeth making the dragon coo and narrow his eyes, concentrating before give her a gum smile which intrigued her when she notice there's no teeth.

"Toothless..." she mumbled.

Her eyes widen when she sees the Dragon jerk its head to its back. Another smile formed on her lip but wider as she climbed on without a second thought. She let out a scream of joy as they took off in the air laughing as the dragon performed several tricks.

She felt free and undoubtedly joy as she let out a cry as the Dragon made full spin. She looked down and marveled as the world under her have gotten smaller but when she look up no word could describe the enchantment she sees. She is closer to the stars that she could touch it, it glitter like diamond in the sky and with moon bright glow it looks magical. Then she feels something within her like her instinct overwhelmed her soul that wanted to add to this enchantment. So letting her instinct guide her as she closes her eyes. The ebony Dragon glance back at the girl with gum smile as her outline glow bright pink and then dozen of tiny winged female Sprites appear from her and fly happily as they roam around the Dragon giggling and squealing.

The girl smiled grows and watch as the tiny girls fly around her, their wings are glittering and produces magical dusts from flapping their butterfly wings faster making its blurry but the speed of their flapping wings creates blur color. One of them comes close to the girl's face as she took the time to see up close, the little winged girl has a stunning face and curly hair and short dress and her eyes are amazingly ruby color, and she created her.

The little being giggled and spin around her head before she joined with others.

The girl, the Dragon, and the littlest beings are playing around and then the Dragon did the loop-De-loop that she lose her grip and plummet towards the ground faster than the screeching dragon who could not catch her in time. She crashed inside a forge filled with sharp tools. She pulled herself out of a bucket and rubbed her sore bottom before cringing at the damage she has done and the man standing before her.

"Oh, sir! I'm so sorry for the damage I've caused," The man seem didn't hear her as he continued doing his work. "I'll help clean it up as soon as I-"

Just then she heard a young child voice call from behind her and see a young boy with brown hair coming her way. Before she had time to move away, the boy ran right through as if she was a ghost.

"No," She gasped and turn around to see the man and the boy talking without glancing her way. With the uncertainty, she stumbled out of the forge and came across a village filled with Vikings but it did not matter to her because they, too, walk right through.

"Hello? Somebody? Anybody!" She stumbled backwards as she wrapped her arms around her.

'Why?' She thought as she lets out a choked sob.

She heard a soft coo/growl from behind her and saw that it was the same dragon from before and the little beings. She noticed that it too had people walk through them, as well. She patted the Dragon's forehead as it nudged its cheek with her cheek in comfort before they walk back in the forest with flying beings following them, leaving trails of foot/paw prints on the muddy ground. Tears silently rolled down her cheeks as pale green glow formed around her body.

'My name is Hiccup Tale. How do I know this? Because the moon told me... That was all he ever said to me. But that was a long time ago.'

* * *

>Yep, you noticed the changes I made I asked LonelyRedTears for that and she didn't mind. I hope you like and look up for the next chapter of Believe is Seeing.

2. The Nightmare Rises Once More

The Nightmare Rises Once More

"Talking"

'Talking in Thought'

"YELLING"

'YELLING IN THOUGHT'

Flashback

Being Invisible

When the moon cast a shallow beam over my body, I kissed the stars I kissed the stars as I reflected upon.

Days of yore. Days of yore when I used to fantasize of being visible as someone else and invisible as myselfâ€|.by Sheila Rowell.

Disclaimer: I do not own Rise of the Guardians or How to Train Your Dragon because they're all belong to DreamWorks.

* * *

>Jack is back in Pitch's Lair, the one place he thought he would never see again and yet here he was several years later. It was still the same; darkness and all. He felt a chill run down his spine from the unfamiliar coldness as he walks pass the bridge. When he reached the end, he froze when he heard a chuckle coming from behind him.

"Back to where it all began, eh Jack?" That voice. He knew that voice anywhere.

"Pitch!" he said as he whipped around and blasted out a bolt of ice at a wall. He glared as he tighten his grip and jerked his head left and right as he took a few steps back.

"Long time no see Jack," Pitch's shadow appear from behind Jack before he disappears.

"What do you want?" he turn around but nothing is there.

"You of all people should now that," his voice echo through the Lair eerily.

"I'm not joining you," Jack said through gritted teeth as he clenched her fists around his staff.

A cackle echoed through the walls.

"My, my. Someone has grown an ego since my absent. But I must admit; it does involve you and the Guardians. Sad thing is," Jack narrowed his eyes when Pitch came out of the shadows.

"This time you will be defeated."

"We'll never lose to you, as long as children believe-"

"Oh but Jack," Pitch took a few steps back and once again disappeared in the shadows.

"Sometimes being believed in isn't always the best thing."

Jack let out a yell as he charged only to stop when he saw two blood shot red eyes staring at him. Without any sort of warning, the red eyed creature lunged and soon Jack images began to flash before Jack eyes; light, darkness, two girls, one young, and one big, tears, and then a loud roar followed by a dragon shape figure coming his way.

Jack woke up with a startle and fell off the branch he was sleeping on. Fortunately for him, there was a nice pile of snow to cushion his fall.

"Ow!" he grumbled as he pushed himself up to his feet, his staff still clutched in his hand as he used his free hand to massage the top part of his head.

"What a nightmare," he said with half closed eyes before shooting them open.

"Nightmare!? It can't be. How is he back?" He looked up and saw the aurora Borealis (northern lights) in the twilight sky.

"Guardians assemble, huh?" he said as he flew up in the air and zoomed to there the signal was coming from. As he flew, he saw Sandy flying on his golden airplane.

"Sandy!" he called out earning a wave from the Guardian of Dreams. Sandy waved and flashed a golden horse above his head. Jack nodded.

"I know me too."

And the two raced towards Santa's Workshop.

At Santa's Workshop, Jack noticed that the Yetis were working double than he last remembered.

'I forgot, Christmas is in three weeks. Better get started on spreading more snow.'

He flew up and landed in the Globe Room and smiled. He remembered when he first came here. Well, more like taken here by force. Still, it was a fond memory to think of. Speaking of memories-

"Jack!" the Guardian of Fun turned to see who called him only to have his mouth pried open by a pair of hands that belong to none other than the Tooth Fairy.

"Oh, your teeth look whiter than last time!" she squealed as she examines Jack's teeth.

"Tooth, hands out mouth." North said to her after talking to Phil.

Tooth did so and gave a quick apology to Jack before flying to her fairies whom she began talking to.

One fairy in particular zipped towards Jack and hugged his cheek which made him laugh, "Nice to see you too, Baby Tooth." Baby Tooth squeaked with joy.

"Good day, Frostbite." Bunny said as he walked up behind Jack with his arms crossed. Jack turned around and gave a mock bow to the Easter Bunny.

"And greetings to you too, Kangaroo." Bunny's ear twitched, but he couldn't help but smirk.

'Bloody show pony hasn't changed a bit.'

"All right," North finally said as he clasped his hands together.

"I suppose you all know why I called you here."

All the Guardians soon turned their attention to the white haired man and Jack felt himself tightening his grip on his staff.

"Pitch is back,"

Tooth gasped, and all her fairies squeaked in shock, Baby Tooth hid behind her mother. Bunny's ears perked up. Sandy flashed a bunch of random symbols over his head. And Jack felt a wave of nausea hit him.

'So; it was correct. But then...' the last thing he remembered that Pitch was dragged back to his Lair forcefully by his own Fear. So how did he escape?

"How?" he asked. North sigh in despair and said.

"You can't destroy fear."

"_You can't kill fear, Jack._" Jack felt a chill run down his spine as Pitch's words echoed through his head.

"It seems that Pitch is up to something bad again, but this time it's different. I feel it in my belly," North said as he held his stomach for more emphasizing.

"Well, whatever that wanker is up to, we'll be ready. We beat him several times before." Bunny declared and Sandy nodded, pounding his fist in his hand.

"But what is he up to this time?" Tooth asked.

"Pitch can be tricky at times." She added.

Jack looked down, remembering how he helped that good for nothing snake ruin Easter, and he damned well won't let it happen again.

"Either way, we can't let him succeed at whatever it is he is planning."

"That is right," North agreed.

"But it may take more than all of us to beat this." North added which made everyone bewildered at his statement.

"Wait! Are you sayingâ€|?" Bunny began.

"That a new Guardian was chosen?" Tooth finished.

Sandy made an exclamation point on top of his head.

This was big, usually Manny would wait for all the Guardians to be here before he shows them the chosen Guardian.

"Well, generally speaking." North admitted rubbing the back of his head. Jack gave the Guardian of Wonder a puzzled look.

"What do you mean?"

"Man in Moon said that new Guardian has a..." he waves his hands searching for the right word.

"Option." Then he shrugged.

"Option?" The three Guardians said in unison as Sandy placed a question mark on top of his head.

"Manny said that they have choice in becoming Guardian orâ€|take second offer." The Guardians, minus Jack, all looked at him with horror and concern.

"Wait," Jack said cutting North off before the man could speak.

"How come I didn't get a second offer?"

"Because it is not one to be taken lightly, mate." Bunny told him solemnly.

"If the second offer is chosen it could affect their life permanently." Tooth added as her fairies squeaked in agreement.

"But we'll tell them that after we bring them here," North said with a smile on his face.

"Uh, do we at least get to know who THEY are?" Jack asked with a hint of annoyance.

"SHE is a GIRL and other knowing how she looks I know nothing of her." North said.

All the Guardians gave North a look of disbelief while Tooth silently cheered that she may not have to be the only girl on the team.

"Well, what does she look like?" she asked, trying to hold in her joy.

The others break out of their shock and listen to North.

"Yeah, what does she look like?" Jack asked curiously wonder who is the chosen girl.

Elsewhere, flying high above the clouds was a huge figure ,black dragon to be exact also referred to as a Night Fury and on this Night Fury was none then girl that goes by the name Hiccup.

She was a young girl that looked roughly around fifteen or sixteen she had bandages wrapped from her wrist to her bicep. Wore short sleeved handmade green shirt and matching leggings a brown fur skirt and open crop vest along with a silver beret cap on top her head. Hiccup smiled as she flew her dragon.

"All right bud." The Night Fury looked at his rider.

"You ready?" The dragon snorted as he jerked her head. Hiccup stood up on her neck. She crouched for a few seconds before leaping off the Night Fury's neck performing a flip and letting a whoop with joy and then the two dived downward. Hiccup looked at her dragon who gave her a toothless smile.

The Night Fury used his paw to tap her rider's shoulder causing her to give a small twirl. Both closed their green eyes as they felt the wind rush threw their cheeks before the two spun and soon Hiccup was back on the Night Fury's neck once more.

"Whoo-hoo!" she wooed while the Night Fury Screech/howl in thrill as he pulled forward and gilded over the oceans making small waves with his massive wings. Hiccup laughed as she felt the water brush pass her cheeks. A pale pink glow formed around her body.

She looked left and right and saw two mermaids on each side of her dragon, jumping and diving back in the water. One waved at Hiccup, who returned the friendly gestured as well before the mermaids vaporized into sparkly dust and fused inside Hiccup whose glow dimmed away when the mermaids were gone.

Her Night Fury took off in the air and flew pass a small sturdy village and towards the forest and into a cove, which they called their home.

Once he landed safely Hiccup jumped off the dragon and began to speak.

"Did you see those mermaids?" Hiccup asked once the Night Fury landed in their secret cove they found. The dragon tilted his head as he listened to his human rant and watched her flail her arms excitedly.

"The way how colorful their fins were, and their hair shined with the sun. Thank Odin they were wearing something to cover their cleavage this time. The last ones didn't and I nearly-" The Night Fury cooed catching his human's attention. Hiccup looked at her dragon and smiled sheepishly.

"Sorry Toothless. I guess I rambled a bit there huh?" The Night Fury, Toothless, growled in agreement.

"But you can't blame me; I haven't controlled my powers yet, and those ones seem friendlier than the Sirens I thought of a long time ago." Her voiced drifted at the last three words before going back to her cheerful self.

"But never mind that, I have to draw them out."

Toothless nodded as Hiccup sat Indian style on the ground and pulled out a journal and began to sketch her creation.

See Hiccup had this gift, she's able to think of these creatures in her head and then they come to life. For the past two hundred years, she has been trying to control what she created and had kept them tucked away in her book once she does.

Humans who were able to see them gave them names for these beings. Dragons, Mermaids, Pegasus, etcetera.

The dragon walked towards his mistress and watched her sketch out what she saw. Once she finished she placed her book down on the grassy ground with the pictures of the two mermaids still being shown.

Toothless let out a gurgling noise when she began to unwrap the bandages on her right, left arm.

Hiccup looked over her shoulder and smiled as she petted her dragon's snout.

"It's okay, bud." she assured him before turning back.

She placed her left hand over the picture and closed her eyes. A bright white glow formed around her body as runic writings encircled around her arm before engraving themselves above the upper page of the mermaids.

The light died down and Hiccup opened her eyes and stared back at Toothless with a smirk on her face,

"Told you there was nothing to worry about boy." Toothless rolled his eyes.

Hiccup laughed and looked back up at the sky.

"It's still bright out," she said feeling Toothless standing beside her. She turned to him.

"How about we take a tour around town?" The Night Fury nodded.

* * *

>Berk, a village that was Hiccup and Toothless's home, had a lot houses and was sturdy, and the people were let's just say that most of the men here were as big as their Viking ancestors.

"I bet if I were born a boy I would be the scrawniest of them all," Hiccup joked but her dragon thought she was being serious because he nodded in agreement.

"Toothless, how dare you? You know if I were one, there would be consequences keeping all of this raw Vikingness contains!" she said as she flexed her arms at him as she sounds tough; Toothless gave her a look that said "I'll take my chances." Hiccup pouted and nudged her dragon,

"You traitor."

The two walk through the village with Hiccup giving mock hellos even though she knew no one can see her.

Although, some kids could see Toothless, but they grew scared and ran away from them in fear.

"I still can't believe with all the horror these kids see, they're still afraid of you," she told her Dragon and snorted when she saw him held his head up with pride.

"Yeah, yeah, Mr. Big Ego." she said before coming to a stop.

She saw a group of young boy's sword fighting with handmade wooden swords and a few girls playing with their dolls.

But there was one in particular that caught her interest.

Sitting by himself under an oak tree reading a book was a boy that looked around eight or so wearing sneakers, a brown jacket and black pants and a hat.

"Toothless, go hide." She told her dragon who nodded and went in the forest.

"What'd you got there sport?" Hiccup walked closer to see what the kid was reading and saw that it was a scrap book filled pictures of her creatures. She even saw ones of the unicorn she made just a few days ago.

"How did you get these?" She asked the kid who just kept looking at her pictures.

"Well look who's here?" A boy with blonde hair said as he yanked the book away.

"Hey! Give that back!" the kid who was sitting stood up and held his hand out. Hiccup noticed that the kid looked a lot shorter than the other one.

The other children walk from behind blonde hair boy and look at the pictures. The boys snickered while the girls giggled.

"Taking photos of your imaginary creatures?" The girl with black hair asked.

The kid stomped his foot down and clutched his hands into fists.

"They're not imaginary!" he argued.

"Then how come we can't see them?" Another boy with blonde hair asked with his arms crossed.

"Because you don't believe in them," the kid told them.

"Oh," a girl said as she yanked the kid's hat off, and short auburn brown hair fell in place.

"And what makes you so special Lyla?" the girl carelessly tossed the hat in another direction where it fell in a muddy pond. Hiccup's eyes widen.

'She's a girl?'

"Because I do," she said simply.

"So, believing is how we'll see them?" The blonde hair boy said as he stared at the book. His brown eyes widen.

"Wait, I do see something."

Lyla's green eyes stared at him for a second before widening as she saw him rip the book in two.

"Shredding paper."

Hiccup felt a pain hit her chest.

"What are you doing, Ash? Stop!" Lyla screamed as she ran to save her book only to be pushed roughly on the ground by a couple of girls while the boys took a turn in ripping them.

Once they were done, a gush of wind blew by, and scrap of remaining papers book cover flew away. Ash dusted his hands off and smirked.

"See what happens when you don't fit in, Hiccup?" Hiccup's eyes widen when she heard her name has used as an insult.

Lyla felt tears well up in her eyes as she stood up on her feet and watched the children leave. As they left she heard them whisper about her.

"Gods, she is such a freak."

"I know, ever since three years when we all had bad dreams she's been-"

"Yeah, she thinks she can see things-"

"Weirdo, that's all she is."

Finally having enough Lyla ran back to her house bursting into tears.

Hiccup held her hand out to the girl but then felt her ran through her. Hiccup looks down sadly as she wrapped her hands around herself. She looked when she saw Toothless by her side.

"It's not fair, is it boy?" Toothless cooed as they both look at the running girl sadly.

* * *

>When Night time came, Hiccup and Toothless flew through the village to find the girl, Lyla.

When they came, to the one that was on the highest hill above all they noticed a light was still on. Toothless flew towards the light and let Hiccup go inside the room, and noticed the window was open.

"Stay here" she whispered to him before going inside.

Hiccup stared at the room in awe when she saw several more photos of her work; she has never seen so much artwork that covers the entire wall bringing out pure childhood talent and its clear to her it emits happiness and proud in her work.

"Wow," she whispered only to jerk at the sound of the door opening and saw that it was the same girl from before. She wore a brown night gown and saw that she had light freckles on her face and her eyes were a bit red and puffy.

Hiccup felt her heart ached when she looked at the sad little girl.

Lyla sighed and held stared at her toy dragon in the eye. This stuffed Dragon had bluish gray color fur, large jaw for small body and had large wing span, and yellow eyes with big pupil staring back at Lyla.

"Looks like it's just you and me tonight again, Starfire." she sighed as she picked up a book from her shelf and tucked her and her dragon to bed. Hiccup looked at her in sorrow until Lyla began to read.

"Once upon a time, in a faraway land there lived a Princess, who was betrothed to the Prince." An idea formed in Hiccup's head as she sat down beside Lyla and waved her hand over Lyla as she continued reading.

Hiccup's forest green eyes changed into a bright silvery color as did Lyla's

"But the Princess did not want to marry the Prince for she was in love with the young Blacksmith. The King did not like this and ordered a Warlock to get rid of the Blacksmith. The Warlock agreed but said that his generosity came with a price. Without realizing it, the King hand over the kingdom to the evil Warlock. Upon realizing this, the Princess went to stop the Warlock with the help of her beloved Blacksmith.

"It was a great battle and it seemed all was well until..."

"Prepare to die," The Warlock said as he cast a bolt of lightning towards the Princess, who was fighting off ghouls.

_"Princess!" The Blacksmith shouted and push his beloved out of the way taking the blow instead._

"No!" She shouted.

"The Princess ran to her fallen beloved and begged for him to stay alive."

"Please, don't leave me," She told him as tears streamed down her face.

The Blacksmith smiled weakly as he placed his hand behind her head.

"I will never leave you." He whispered as he gently pulled her down to kiss.

"Ew!" Lyla exclaimed as Hiccup giggled before continue reading.

"As they shared their kiss a new magic came to be and with it the Princess was able to take down the Warlock, save her kingdom, and her loved ones. Once everything was restored the King realized his foolish behavior and declared that the Princess and Blacksmith shall become married, and they all lived happily ever after."

Once she finished reading the book, both Hiccup and Lyla's eyes change from silver to green and soon Lyla felt her eyes become groggily, and she let out a yawn.

Hiccup smiled when she saw the young girl's eyes began to flutter before she drifted off into a peaceful slumber. She placed the book back in the shelf and draped the blanket over Lyla's chin. She looked in awe when the back of her hand brushed against the girl who leaned in to the warmth.

Hiccup pulled away and walked back to the open window and closed it behind her as she jumped down.

She wiped the dust off her hands and looked around to find Toothless, but he's nowhere around, he supposed to stay here till she comes back.

"Toothless?" she said cautiously.

She heard a rustling in the bushes and saw a black blur zoom past the trees.

"Toothless!" she called out as she ran to her friend.

She ran through the forest calling out to her friend who was persistently running away.

"Toothless!" she called out again as she stumbled into an open grass field. She panted before checking her surroundings. She cupped her hands over mouth and shouted.

"TOOTHLESS!" She waited for her dragon to response but did not receive one.

"Where did you go?" she silently asked as she wrapped her arms around her body. Her eyes squinted when she saw a something heading her way; she squinted her eyes and see the creature coming toward were black and thought it's her Dragon.

"Toothless!" she exclaimed happily as she ran to greet her friend only to stop when she saw that it wasn't her dragon. Instead, she saw a pack of black sand horses standing in a perfect row neighing ghostly with scary yellow eyes.

She took a few steps back before twirling around bolting away. The Nightmares let out a screeching neigh as they chased after her.

Hiccup began to glow green as she tried to summon one of her creatures when one of the Nightmare came from the front, and it used his hooves and made contact to her head causing her beret flew off and landed a few feet away from her revealing her long auburn brown hair and fell on the ground, becoming unconscious from the hit.

All the Nightmares encircled around her but before any of them could make any sudden movements, a bolt of ice and a boomerang sliced threw a few of them. The Nightmares tried to fend them, but there were soon over thrown by more bolts of ice till every last one them is gone.

"That was a lot more than I expected," Bunny admitted as he caught his boomerang and placed it in his sheathe.

"What the bloody hell were they after?"

"Bunny look!" The Guardian of Hope hopped to his friend and saw him cradling a girl that looked around his age in his arms.

"Hey, you okay?" Jack asked her gently earning a soft groan in return. For a second green eyes, met blue before Hiccup closed them and let her head fall limp against Jack's chest.

"We have to take her to North's," Bunny declared as he tossed a magic snow-globe for them, and soon a portal appeared. Jack nodded as he stood up with the girl safe in his arms before the two walk through.

Though hiding in the shadows of the trees was the Nightmare King himself where he saw the whole thing happened. He was angry that his Nightmares failed their task, but he couldn't help but to grin anyways as he disappears and then reappear in his Lair and looked at one of his cages where a bound Toothless laid, trying to break free from his bound.

"Don't worry dragon," Pitch said as he had held up Hiccup's beret in his palm before a black sand engulfed it into nothingness.

"Your creator will come for you soon."

Toothless stopped his struggling and scooted away as far as the cage would let him when the evil black sand came near him.

"After all," he began bearing his fangs as he grinned sinisterly.

"She belongs to me."

* * *

>Here you go, chapter two! And I add little to that. Stay tuned for next time on Believe is Seeing.

.

3. A Bitter Chosen

A Bitter Chosen

"Talking"

'Talking in Thought'

"YELLING"

'YELLING IN THOUGHT'

Flashback

Man in the Moon

Moon in your splendor shine your light on me. Blue moon, half moon, makes no difference. You see, to me you will always be.

The Man in the Moon, who lights the way, for my love, so he can open my heart with his key.

Man in the moon, silvery moon. Light my life with theeâ€|.by Melba Durham.

Disclaimer: I do not own Rise of the Guardians or How to Train Your Dragon because they're all belong to DreamWorks.

* * *

>On soft, cozy bed lay Hiccup sleeping soundly in a warm bed with her head have been bandaged. She groan softly as a sign of waking up and when she finally came to the first thing Hiccup felt was a huge headache. She groaned as she sat up and held her throbbing forehead, her eyes shut tightly from the pain and notice the bandage around her head.

"What happen?" she moaned as she opens her eyes, blinking a few times to get a better adjustment for her visions.

When they finally came to focus, she nearly froze in place when she saw that she was in a room filled with Christmas decorations.

'Ooookay. I'm sure Snoggletog is three months away. So where am I?' before she can begin deepening her investigation she froze when she heard a soft groan coming from her left side. She turned her head towards the sound and noticed that there was a boy with white hair sleeping, with his head over his arms, on the edge of the bed.

'Who is...?' her eyes widen in realization.

'He's a spirit? How did he find me?' She jerked at the sound of the door slamming causing the boy to stir in his sleep.

Hiccup's instinct told her to run but felt herself glued to the bed as she watched the other wake up from his slumber and then meadow green eyes met sparkling blue.

Jack groaned when he the sound of the door banging before deciding it was time to wake himself up.

As he raised his head up, rubbing his face and blinked a few times to regain his sight and noticed that a figure began to appear in his vision. When they finally adjusted he felt time slow still.

It was the girl him and Bunny saved her from Nightmares, but he honestly didn't see how she looked.

She wore clothes that seem to clash together yet they worked for her well, and he noted that her left arm was wrapped in a bandage. She had shoulder length dark auburn hair that some tips sticking outwards, light freckles over her cheeks, light skin, and small soft pink lips. But those eyes that got his undivided attention the most, they are most ever green eyes he ever seen they seem to hypnotize Jack and feel like drawn to her eyes like moth to the flame, and he can see warm hazel around her pupils giving such gentle glow.

'Woow!'

Hiccup was also taking note in the boy's features, as well. He wore brown tattered trousers and a blue hooded sweater with frost around the collar. Pale skin, short white spiky hair and icing blue eyes. She won't deny herself that this boy is quite handsome not to mention those eyes are amazing to gaze at. But why isn't he trying anything? Isn't he going to hurt like the _others_?

They kept staring at each other both transfixed at what they saw but Hiccup began to feel worried as she began to edge away as slow as possible.

Jack raised his hand which startled her, so she screamed and grabbed the nearest object next to her, which, unfortunately, was an Elf, and whacked the white hair boy.

The force was so strong that Jack was knocked out of his chair and fell roughly on the wooden floor.

Jack, who was laying on his back dazed and unexpected from the attack, then he realized the girl is still here, standing up and she no condition to stand up, he got up to his feet and reached for his staff.

"Wait!" he called out to her. Hiccup wasted no time to scramble to her feet and ran out of the door.

Hiccup pulled the door open, ran out and slammed it shut behind her, putting a chair under the door knob with a nearby chair.

When she turned around she lets out a startled gasped at what she saw.

Hundreds of Yetis were making toys and cleaning messes while Elves were busying themselves with their own activities and hurting themselves, but she was still in awe at what she saw.

Though she couldn't enjoy the moment for so long because the sound of a door busting down cause her to jerk her head to the noise and saw that the boy had got out. When he saw her, she ran causing Jack to give chase.

She saw the Elves and grabbed them, without realizing it to the Elves she began throwing them at Jack who dodges them with some effort.

"Stop!" Jack said, ducking when three elves came flying by.

"Stay away from me!" she yelled as she threw more unfortunate Elves.

"I'm not gonna hurt you!" Jack tried to reason as he whacked one Elf that came close to his face with his staff.

"Please, listen! Whoa" he ducked when she threw Dingle and flew over his head as Dingle scream.

Before Hiccup could hurl one last Elf at him, a loud booming voice startled the both of them.

"What's all the ruckus?" North asked as the Yetis stopped what they were doing and looked at the two teens.

Hiccup turned around and saw two people standing behind her. One was an old man with a long white beard, blue eyes, wearing red shirt, black pants and boots and a giant six foot gray Pooka with black markings on his arms and forehead and bright green eyes.

'Oh no, more spirits.' She took a few steps away while she holds the Elf in a tight grip.

'I'm in trouble.'

"Look, what I ever did, I'm sorry, okay. I didn't mean to do it." The three Guardians raised their eyebrows.

"Sheila, you didn't do anything," Bunny assured her.

"Uh, I beg to differ. She was attacking me with elves," Jack argued as he massaged his head where she hit him, and they all look to see all the Elves that been thrown are down to the count and groaning.

"You were creeping up on me when I was sleeping." Hiccup accused.

"Jack!" North scolded, and Bunny's ears perked up.

"I didn't do that!" Jack objected.

"Then why were you with me?" Hiccup asked.

"Because I was watching over you." Jack explained.

"You were going to attack me," she said.

"Now why would he do that?" North asked before Jack could say anything.

"We have no reason to do so."

Hiccup's eyes soften, and her body eased up after hearing that but she still asked while holding the Elf.

"Then why am I here?"

"Well," Jack floated pass her and landed in between North and Bunny.

"You were chosen,"

"Chosen?" she questioned.

"That is right," North said as he spread his arms out with joy.

"As new Guardian!" then just like before when Jack was chosen the two Yetis sound their cry as hold out the fire torches and right on cue the Elves begin their music, surprising Hiccup. She looks down as Elves march on large man's side in perfect formation and how well they practiced. Then two more Yeti doing fire staff spinning.

Bunny roll his eyes at North to bring up the music parade again, and cross his arms irritatingly. While Jack is smiling as it brought back good memories when they had done the music parade just for him when he was announced and became the new Guardian. But Hiccup still has this confused look on her face to all of this while the Elf she's holding is smiling and dancing.

"Here's the best part" then loud pop coming from above, and it rains colorful sparkling confetti on them. The Yeti with his hands a large book the Book of Guardian handing to North and bow and walks away as North flip the pages. Hiccup can't take much more this and quickly raised her hand.

"Excuse me? Excuse me?" finally North heard her without taking his eyes off of the book, he answered.

"Yes?"

"Um! What's a Guardian?" She gave them a puzzled look, and the music ceases to a halt.

Everyone gave her a look of pure shock but not as shocked as North, Bunny, and Jack that was totally unexpected, North almost dropped the Book of Guardian. Hiccup notice the tension as she bit her lower lip and made her cheeks turn a bit pinkly.

'Did I say something wrong?' after one minute of silence, Jack asked carefully.

"You don't know what the Guardian is?" Jack finally asked as both

North and Bunny exchange glances with each other.

Hiccup put the Elf down and rubbed her left arm.

"Am I supposed to?"

"Mostly every Spirit knows about us, Sheila." Bunny said after recover from his shock.

"I don't hang around with other spirits," Hiccup admitted as she looks down, realizing that she was small compare to the others, minus Jack, who was a head taller than her.

"They don't like me very much; they're afraid of me." she silently whispered so low that even Bunny couldn't hear her that Jack was able to lip read, and he felt something stab his heart from hearing those words.

"Well, no matter. Because Manny has chosen you," North said.

"Manny?" she look up and questioned.

"Man in Moon," North gestured his hand upward towards the sunroof where the said Moon can be seen. Hiccup looked up in complete shock and whispered.

"I don't believe it."

"MIM creates and chooses Guardians that are suited to protect the children of the world," North explained as Hiccup looked at the Globe of Belief. Hiccup let out a short laugh as she ran a hand through her hair.

"You gotta be kidding me, years of leaving me alone and after all this times, he has the nerve to..." then she turned back at them.

"This is some joke, right?" she pointed to herself.

"Do I look qualified to you?" she raised her voice.

"That doesn't really matter-" Jack said but before he could continue she cut him off.

"How can that not matter?" she said to him.

"What makes you guys think I want to be a Guardian in the first place?"

"_What makes you think I want to be a Guardian?_" Jack felt like Dã©jã vu after hearing her saying that.

"You really have no say in this," Bunny said, his voice stern and hard with a hint of concern but Hiccup didn't back down.

"Oh, I'm sorry," Hiccup said in mock plead.

"I thought I had a say in the matter, seeing as how _I_, " she pressed her hands on the nape of her neck.

"Somehow ended up here against my own free will. Do you guys let Spirits choose or force them to do things they don't want to do?" she snarled as her eyes narrowed and Jack notice how her green eyes darken and filled with fury.

"That's not what we're trying to do," North admitted.

"Manny chose you because he believes you have something special inside you that will help children-"

"Believe," Hiccup scoffed.

"I use to believe that the world was flat, I use to believe that a Princess needed her Knight in shiny armor to come rescue her, I use to believe that all people have a heart." She glared at them.

"That word 'believe is bland to me. I resented it!" she hissed causing the guys to render speechlessly, and she wasn't done yet.

"And as for children, I really don't think I'm the right category for them," she crossed her arms and let out a sigh.

"But Mr. Moon is right about one thing, I do have something inside, something other Spirits..." she trailed off almost blowing out her painful secret, she shook her head and said.

"Look, you guys should choose someone else okay? Trust me, you don't want me."

'I'll just end up making a mess anyways.' She mentally added before turning her back at them with her arms crossed.

The three Guardians looked at her. The youngest one giving her a look of sympathy while the older ones gave her a look of worry and concern.

Bunny went behind her and placed a comforting hand on her shoulder which made her stiff.

"Look, Sheila! I understand it's a lot to take in, but you gotta understand that there's no turning back on this. You justâ€¦got to accept the fact that you are now chosen to be a Guardian, and that's that" hearing him say doubled her anger causing her nerve to provoke and soon her body began to glow red as did her eyes. The Pooka jerked away as something formed before them and saw that it was a creature with an eagle head and four claws with white massive wings attached to lion's body. The thing let out a screeched as it stood before its creator in a protecting matter.

All the Elves hid. All the Yetis froze in their spot. North mouth jerked open. Bunny ears flatten. And Jack eyes widen in shock and awe.

Hiccup closed her eyes tightly as the red glow around her dim down before turning around to see her creation. She gasped before brushing her hand over the winged lion body-eagle head creature.

The creature backed down and walked over to its creator who led it away from the Guardians, hoping to find a way out of here but before casting a sad glance over her shoulder at the surprised Guardians before both she and her creature are gone from sight. Another silent overcome them before North broke off.

"Well that could have gone better." North admitted. When they were gone, Bunny shook in slight fear.

"Did you bloody see that?" he asked the two winter spirits.

"That thing came from her!"

"She created it," Jack simply said as he perked up.

"I know what that is! It was a Griffin. A Norse mythical creature! She can create mythical creatures!" North place a shoulder on the younger Guardian to stop him from bursting with joy and accidentally make a blizzard inside his workshop from his excitement.

"Indeed, she is gifted but she does not see it."

"And she doesn't want to be one of us," Bunny said.

"We have to North, otherwise-"

"I know," North said, cutting him off as he exchanged a quick look at Jack, who was off in his own little world.

"Perhaps if we try to persuade her."

"I don't know, Mate. She seems appalled with the idea. I doubt she'll change her mind," Bunny said.

"You can't really blame her," Jack added, finally breaking out of his happy thoughts.

"She's been alone for who knows how long and from how she sounds she has a few of trust issues."

"But why? We would not harm her," North admitted.

"Remember, she mentioned something about other Spirits." Bunny reminded them.

"Guess they don't like her that much."

Jack felt his hand grip his staff tighter. In a way, the girl kind of reminded him of himself. How he reacted when he was chosen as Guardian five decades ago, but Spirits simply ignored him because of his high strong attitude. This girl seems nice and, from what he just saw, her powers were amazing. He was dying to know what else she could create. Why would anyone ignore someone like her?

'If I had known she existed. I would have...'

"If they did, we will have to chat with them later." North informed.

"In meantime, we have to go and find her before we lose her. Very easy to get lost in workshop." Jack's head jerked up and spoke without hesitation.

"I'll do it."

"Jack, this is serious," North said.

"I know. But I'm the only one who has more of an understanding to her," he told them.

"Just let me try and talk to her. I'll make her change her mind or try to make her stay longer." Bunny open his mouth to object, but North beat him to it.

"Good idea, show her what it means to be truly a Guardian."

Jack nodded and took off in the girl's direction, hoping she hadn't gone far.

* * *

>To say the least, Hiccup couldn't have an escape even if she wanted to. After she had fused the griffin back inside of her, she began wondering through the workshop hoping to find an exit.

She let out a groan when she found yet another dead end before walking in another direction.

'What is the place? Some kind of maze?'

Though, she tries to leave she couldn't help but to glance around as she watched the Yeti make all different kinds of toys. It brought a smile to her face as a UFO flew over her head and watched a Yeti play an electric guitar.

Her eyes brighten when she sees a Yeti making a snowboard. If there were one thing, the girl loved more than flying is gliding through the mountains of snow. She loves the thrill and the feeling every time she did a trick which made Toothless roll his eyes in amusement.

'Toothless!' How could she have forgotten? She had left Toothless all alone at Berk. Sure, her Dragon would go to the cove and wait for her until she returns but she has no idea where she was at or leave for that matter. For all she knew, he was freaking out wondering where she was at. But then another thought came into her head: why wasn't here with her? They usually never leave each other's side and for him not be here when she told him to wait made her worried.

Several bad things swarm into her head as she tried to reassure herself that her Dragon was fine. After all, he was a Night Fury, one of her most powerful and first creations she has ever made.

She tried to feel his link but found she could not.

'That's weird!' she tried again but still ended up having the same results.

She tried to remember just what happen last night to see if it had any clues about Toothless. Unfortunately, her mind kept drawing blanks on her.

She didn't like this; she needed to get back to Berk. She needed to see if Toothless was okay.

'I have to get out of here.'

"Excuse me, Miss?" Hiccup looked over her shoulder and saw the Guardian of Fun waving at her. She gives him an annoying/deadpan look before she turned her head back and walked away.

"Hey! Wait!" he said as he jogged towards her till he was by her.

"What do you want?" she retorted.

"I was just hoping we could talk," Jack admitted, smiling.

"Hate to crush it, but I don't feel like it. I just want to get out of here so I can go home." She told him and quicken her pace, but Jack was still able to keep up with her.

"Would you quit following me?"

"Not until you talk to me," Jack pressed.

"No, now leave me alone." Hiccup could feel her anger rising just like before. Why was this boy being so persistent and leave her alone?

"Look," Jack began standing in front of her and walking backwards.

"I know you don't like the idea of being a Guardian. I get it." She glared at him.

"How would you know?"

"Because the Man in the Moon did the same thing to me." Both teens stopped walking as Hiccup gives him a surprised look as Jack continued.

"When I was chosen as a Guardian, I thought they were making a mistake. Hell, some even thought so too. But when I got to know them better and saw just what they did for the children I found my Center."

"Center?" Hiccup tilted her head to the side.

"Something that is a part of you and bring to the world for all to see or feel, whether it be children or a young adult and so one, and that is what you protect." Jack pulled out something from his pocket and held to Hiccup at eye level.

"Do you what this is?" she looks up at the boy weirdly before looking at the wooden doll.

"A tiny wooden baby version of you?" Hiccup guessed jokingly. Jack laugh a little before he nodded and asked.

"What else do you see?" Hiccup stared at the toy, her eyes examining long and hard on it, and Jack noted how her the green shade in her eyes darken not like the time when she triggered but the kind where she think that her green eyes turn into wise greens. Then she has answerers.

"A smile?" Jack beamed.

"And how are smiles usually formed?"

"When people have fun," Hiccup answered.

"That's right, and that's my Center. I bring joy to the world with the snow I create for children to play in." Jack stared at the Globe of Belief.

"Their smile, their laughter, and the way their eyes brighten because of what I created for them, that's what I protect and that's why I'm a Guardian." He spoke softly. Hiccup hugged herself as she stared the Globe of Belief, as well.

"How do you guys know I have something special?" Jack looked back at her.

"I don't know, but I believe." Hiccup looked at him.

"Tell you what," Jack said as he twirled his staff.

"How about we make a deal, you hang out with us for a bit and I'll help you find your Center."

"And what if I still don't want to be one?" she asked.

"Then, we leave you alone." Jack told her. He may not know what the second option was, but that doesn't mean he can't make one of his own for the time being.

"We won't bother you ever again and you'll be off where you want to be." Though, Jack hoped that wouldn't happen because he really wishes he could be a friend with her.

"You promise you will?" she narrowed her eyes, skeptically. Jack held out his hand.

"You have my word. And, by the way, the name's Jack. Jack Frost."

Hiccup stared at him for a few moments, debating whether this was a trap or not. But look in his ice blue eyes and shocked to see honesty in those eyes that something she never seen and it's directing to her. She look down at the open hand and then at Jack.

"Hiccup...Hiccup Tale." After deciding no harm was done, she wrapped her hand around his and gave a small shake but both did not let go of each other's hands yet.

Instead, their eyes locked on each other again for the third time that day, both trying to read the other though they find they could not.

They broke out of their trance, when they heard a squeal of happiness, and the two jerk their hands away and whipping their heads to the sound.

"Tooth?"

* * *

>Chapter 3 everybody and I hope you guys like the new adds I put on. Sure, it's only a few but I hope it's good. See you all next time on Believe is Seeing.

4. Trustful or Doubtful

Trustful or Doubtful

"Talking"

'Talking in Thought'

"YELLING"

'YELLING IN THOUGHT'

Flashback

Welcome to my Dream World

There you stood in front of me. You smiled I couldn't breathe.

You took my breath away, an amazing moment a moment to remember.

Your eyes, the way you walk and talk. So breathtaking when you walk by, the earth underneath me is shaking.

I almost faint at the sight of you then you wrap your arms around me preventing me from falling to, a thousand pieces, lying crumbled on the floor.

You make me melt like snow underneath the warm sun; I just want to say I love you so.

Then I wake up in reality world where you are too good to be true. A world were someone like me doesn't get a chance with a person like you.

So welcome to my dream world. A world were Cinderella does exist. A world were the prince on the white horse still has a chance

Welcome to fiction were nothing is unimaginableâ€|.by Serenity Fay.

Disclaimer: I do not own Rise of the Guardians or How to Train Your Dragon because they're all belong to DreamWorks.

* * *

>Jack saw the Big Four standing there and could feel Hiccup tensed

up a bit when she saw new Spirits, Jack know that the reaction when she met him, North, and Bunny so he decided to show her that they were friendlier than they look.

"Hey Tooth! Hey, Sandy." Jack greeted, earning a wave from the Guardian of Dreams.

"Where've you been?" Sandy made a moon and Z's over his head.

"Oh right, sorry." Jack said before turning back to the younger female Spirit who was staring at them in a look of puzzlement.

Jack opened his mouth to speak Tooth zipped on pass him and hovered right in front of Hiccup, who took a step backward.

"Oh! Hi there, what's your name? You have no idea how relieved I am to have another girl on the team. It's nice being around someone who doesn't smell like eggs or sweat all the time." A soft "hey" was heard from the guys coming from behind her but whether Tooth heard it or not she chose not to respond.

"Anyways, my name is Toothiana feel free to call me Tooth. All my friends do. Oh, do you mind if I check your teeth real quick?"

Hiccup was puzzled at the sudden question and before she has time to respond Tooth's fingers to pry her mouth open. Hiccup made incoherent noises as Tooth inspected her teeth.

"Oh, your teeth are a little crooked but they're strong and white."

"Tooth!" Jack exclaimed as Hiccup pulled herself away and hid behind Jack.

"Take it easy. She's nervous as it is being around other Spirits."

"Oh," Tooth said bashfully as she rubbed her arm in embarrassment.

"Sorry, it's a habit of mine to inspect teeth. I am the Tooth Fairy after all." she smiled apologetically.

Hiccup peeked her head over Jack's shoulder when she saw the bird-lady meant no harm before she is side stepping away from Jack. Instead of speaking when she opened her mouth she gasped when she saw humanoid hummingbirds floating beside Tooth.

"Who are they?" she asked when she walked near one which happen to be Baby Tooth who fluttered right in front of her. Tooth seems to smile when she sees the girl take an interest in her Fairies.

"These girls are my Fairies." she said proudly.

"They're amazing!" Hiccup breathed as she examined Baby Tooth.

"Just look at them. Their feathers look so soft, and the color is just gorgeous." Baby Tooth squeaked and flew around Hiccup who laughed.

"I really like your wings, beautiful designs, they're so clear, but you can see a hint of sparkle in them," then all the mini Fairies flew next to Hiccup feeling a bit left out, and all squeaked at her at once.

"Girls, girls. Let's not disgrace the uniform now." Hiccup laughed lightly as the fairies back away after being scolded by Tooth.

"You made them?" Hiccup asked, and Tooth nodded.

"They're all part of me."

'Part of me.'

"Well that explains where they got their beauty from." Hiccup smiled causing Jack to feel a twist in his stomach.

"They really are something Tooth, you're lucky to have them as your own."

Tooth felt touched at the girl's word. She loves her Fairies to death and would do anything for them and to have someone she barely met to say such words they just warmed her heart.

"Why thank you um..." Hiccup mentally scolded herself for not introducing herself.

"Sorry, my name is Hiccup. Pleasure to meet you." she said as she gave a small bow which Tooth and her mini Fairies returned.

When Hiccup straightened herself up, she saw small gold man who was smiling at her.

"Hello," she greeted. Sandy offered a small wave which made her eyes widen.

"Can you not speak?" Sandy had both his hands waving to assure that its okay and flashed several signs on his head which what appeared to be gold sand.

"Oh, you use your sand to communicate, impressive. How come?" Sandy made an image of a child sleeping on their bed, and he held a finger over his lips.

"You don't want to wake up the children?" Sandy nodded, happy that she got it right.

"So, I'm guessing Jack already introduce himself right?" Tooth asked, and the two teens nodded.

"What about North and Bunny."

"Not... exactly," Jack said as he rubbed the back of his head. Tooth gave him a puzzled look.

"Why, what happen?" Hiccup sighed; she had forgotten her little episode earlier with the other two, and she really disliked the idea of trying to talk to them again but she have to apologize for her little tantrum.

'They probably don't like me, anyways.' She went up to them and said.

"North and Bunny, correct? I'm sorry about before." Hiccup said looking down to hide her eyes and pink cheeks. Tooth let out an 'hmp' as she place her hands on her hips before turning so she can face the two taller males and looking displeased.

"Well?" she said, raising her eyebrows at them.

"What are you guys waiting for? It's impolite that she has to, and she had to come here unwillingly."

"At least she didn't get shoved in a sack and thrown into a magic portal," Jack mumbled under his breath but only Hiccup and Bunny were able to hear him.

"That was a good day, Mate." Bunny snickered earning a glare from Jack.

"How come you didn't use your staff to get out? Surely, you could've ice your way out or something," Hiccup asked innocently which made everyone lost in thought. Jack rubbed the back of his head.

"Um..."

"Even if Jack tried he would not get out," North answered.

"Sack's made specifically to hold all gifts for children around the world and is tearing proof. Much easier to carry,"

"You leave those colorful boxes filled with toys for the children?" Hiccup asked. She has seen children getting those during Snoggletog time, and all were very happy the strange objects inside of them.

"That is right. You familiar with my work I see," North beamed.

"Christmas is celebrated where you're from, I presume."

'Christmas? Is that what they call it?'

"Um, well. The people there celebrate a holiday called Snoggletog."

"Same thing, different label." North waved it off. Hiccup chuckled feeling sort of remembrance when she heard North speak.

"Speaking of Christmas, I must get ready for preparation this year. Much work to be done." Bunny rolled his eyes.

"You got three weeks North and you're practically done, what more do you need to do?" North gave him a look.

"I must do check list, I have yet to do it twice." Then Jack perked up and asked.

"Hey, North am I-"

"Jack, you're still on Naughty List. No presents for you." Hiccup covered her mouth to stifle her laugh as Jack pouted.

"Aren't you a little old for toys, Mate?" Bunny asked.

Jack responded by crossing arms as if he was just told he was too little to go on a roller coaster ride which made Hiccup snort.

'He's just as bad Toothless when I don't give him cod. Oh, my gods! That's right.'

"Umâ€|" She blushed when everyone turned their attention towards her.

"Not that this is all fun and all, but I should really get back home." Everyone seemed a bit concern while Jack looked genuinely sad.

'What's with them?'

"Is that really a good idea?" Tooth asked.

"Why don't stay here for a bit and see what we do?" Jack's head perked at Tooth's idea.

"That's very tempting but I have to get back home and check up on-"

'Toothless.' She mentally said.

"You guys have beenâ€|" nice but I really need to get b-"

"I'll do it," Jack bluntly volunteered. The four Guardians and Hiccup blinked, so he elaborated.

"I'll take you home. It's the least I can do."

"Oh, that'sâ€|"

'A really bad idea.' She mentally finished as she waved her hands.

"That's fine. I know my way back home; I can take care of myself."

"Oh, come on," Jack said as he flew over next to her.

"Am I really that intimidating?"

'No, but Toothless is.'

"I just hate it when people do something that I know I am capable of doing on my own." She verified.

"Don't think of it like that, I'm just offering my hospitality is all," Jack explained.

'Not to mention, if Pitch tries anything I can stop him.'

"Actually," North began; catching on with Jack was trying to do.

"It would be a good idea if Jack takes you. We need him so I can finish making toys, for children."

"Frostbite has a habit of freezing things when he's bored." Bunny grumbled, remembering the time Jack came into his Warren and froze all his carrots.

Jack smiled innocently, and Bunny responded with a snort.

"So, what do you say Hic?" Jack asked as Hiccup blinked.

'Hic? Wow, that's very creative.' She thought before pondering with the idea. Jack seems nice and all, offering to take her home but she really dislikes the idea. Not because of Toothless, not liking to meet new Spirits but because she doesn't like the thought of a Spirit knowing where she lives.

She spent her whole life trying to hide from others Spirits, making sure they never knew where she reside.

'Why can't I say no? Is it because them or is it because they're trying? No, it's because of him.'

She wanted to say no. She wanted to say that she could get home on her own. Anything. But one look in Jack's eyes, those deep blue child-like eyes, and her tongue become tied.

Hiccup closed her eyes and sighed.

'I'm going to regret this. I know it.' She re-opened them and said.

"Fine. But you just drop me off and then leave, that's it." she told him. Jack stood up straighter and nodded.

"Sounds fair. When would you like to leave?"

"Right now sounds nice," She said.

"Then it's settled," North announced.

"Jack shall escort you home but no using magic snow globes."

"Snow globes?" Hiccup questioned.

"That just something that helps us travel faster." Jack informed as he walked beside Hiccup.

"Ready to go?" Hiccup nodded and blushed slightly as Jack held her hand and led her away.

Once the two young Spirits were gone so did Bunny spoke.

"There's something off about her." Tooth looked at him.

"What do you mean?" Sandy placed a question mark on his head.

"I mean do you guys really think that she's qualified to be a Guardian?"

"Oh Bunny-"

"You didn't see what she did Tooth. She brought this, this creature from inside of her. That thing, a Griffin, was as real as a human. It could've-"

"Bunny, enough-" she told him but Bunny continued.

"All I'm saying is I'm not so sure if Manny made the right choice about giving a girl like her such a dangerous power." The mini-fairies squeaked with protest as Tooth placed her fists on her hips.

"Bunny how could say such a thing? Dangerous Spirit at all. From what I see, she seems like a sweet girl. You should know better than to judge." Tooth said

Sandy nodded in agreement. He liked the girl already, and he could tell that Jack did, as well. North, who was quiet the whole time, finally decided to speak.

"Actually, for once Bunny may be right."

"What?" Both Bunny and Tooth said in unison as Sandy just stared at him with an expression saying he thought the same thing.

"I have heard stories from other Spirits," North began as he walked towards the globe and place his hands on his control panel, it was a good thing that Jack took her that's way he can talk to his fellow Guardians privately.

"About a girl that possessed the ability to summon monstrous creatures. She would unleash them to both Spirits and humans alike."

Tooth and her fairies gasped and covered while both Bunny and Sandy's eyes widen. They have heard the rumors, as well. It was said that the girl could create any monster imaginable to humankind.

"You don't think she's the same girl as that one, do you?" Tooth asked.

"Manny would never do that-"

"We cannot be certain but its best if we know exactly who it is we are dealing with." North said turning his attention back to his friends.

"We must do what is best for children that are our oath as Guardians. Let's just hope it doesn't not come to it."

Tooth looks down sadly before flying back to her mini fairies. He barked an order out in Russian and soon Phil and another Yeti came to North.

"I need you guys to run an errand for me. I need you find any other Spirits who know of the name Hiccup Tale and then report back to me of what you've learned, got it?"

Phil spoke to North in Yetinese who nodded before the two Yetis activated a snow globe and went through it.

'I just hope whatever we learn about her is good.' Was all North could think of before they wait for the Yetis to return with good news they hope for.

* * *

>Hiccup let out a scream as she tighten her hold around Jack's neck who was struggling with trying to control his flying.

When Jack had said that they were going to fly home, she didn't expect him to grab her and take off in the air without hearing her consult.

Don't get her wrong, she loved flying. It was one of the most amazing things she has ever felt in her immortal life, but she was able to feel what Toothless was about to do.

"Hey, Hiccup. If you hold on any tighter my head's gonna pop off." Jack squeaked; he blushed as he felt the girl spirit bury her head in the back of his neck.

"Hey, it's okay. I'm not gonna let anything happen to us."

"Says you! You nearly got us hit by that white flying contraption in the sky!" Hiccup argued as she kept her eyes closed.

"How was I suppose know that the plane was in the clouds?" Jack countered.

"So, where do you live anyways?"

"...Berk, "

"Berk, huh?" Jack echoed.

"Sounds... Interesting. Where's it located at?"

"I don't know, I can't see." She said.

"Then why don't you look?" Hiccup remained silent at Jack's question.

"Come on, Hic. I promise you'll like the view." Hiccup slowly pried her eyes open and looked down, letting out a small gasp as she did so.

This is way different from riding on Toothless, but it still has the same feeling. The feeling the wind brushed her cheeks and ruffling her hair felt amazing and softness of the cloud after touching it.

"Hey Hic, do you trust me?" Hiccup snapped out and looked at the white haired boy.

"Give me your hand,"

"What?" she asked.

"Don't worry, it's nothing bad." he assured her.

Hiccup wasn't sure what the Winter Sprite was going to do, but she has always been a curious girl, Toothless always scolded her for that, so she held out her right hand to him.

"The left one," he corrected her.

Hiccup raised an eyebrow but complied and soon she felt herself slipped off of Jack's back and was flying beside them with their arms clasped tight together. She gasped and look down to see herself that she's actually flying without Toothless or Jack but on the wind, it's the most amazing thing.

"It's a little trick I learn a while back." Jack explained as they flew over the city.

"I use to do this with my friend, Jamie, all the time."

Hiccup noted that there was a hint of sorrow in the Winter Sprite's tone when saying that name, but she chose to ignore it and enjoyed the scenery and notices something tall and has a small fire in the glass.

"Wow, what strange torches." Jack looked down and laughed.

"Those are lamppost." Hiccup gave him a puzzled look making Jack stop laughing.

"Wow, how long has it been since you been out?" Hiccup looked away.

"I tend to forget those times. They weren't very fond memories for me."

"Why is that?" Jack asked, he really wanted to help her feel welcomed but how could he if she wants to keep to herself all the time.

'She's just like me.' Hiccup shook her head.

"I really don't want to spoil this trip with that. I just want to get home and see my Dragon." Jack nodded before he realized what she had said.

"Dragon?! You mean like you created the Dragon like you did with Griffin?" Hiccup tense when she realized that she accidentally spilled the beans and sigh.

"Yeahâ€¦" she looked away before she was shocked when Jack laughed like child getting the perfect present that he always want.

"That's cool! I can't wait to see it! He exclaimed, and Hiccup looks at the boy with bewilderment.

'He'sâ€¦nothing like those other Spirits. Normally everyone with sensible mind would run away before they could meet Toothless, but he'sâ€¦|'

"Right, so where do you live?" she broke out of her thought when Jack asked and looking excited because he really wants to see her Dragon.

"Oh! Just fly us over the sea and keep going north and south."

"Alrighty then," Jack did as instructed.

As they flew over the sea Hiccup close her eyes as she feels the cool breeze brush past her cheeks. She always loved it when she rides with Toothless but having the feeling of flying on your own was such a different atmosphere. She looked forward and watched as the sun began to set over the horizon.

"It's sad when the day ends, and a new one begins," Jack blinked and looked at Hiccup.

"Why do you say that?" Hiccup shrugged.

"I just hate it when things go away is all." Jack glanced down.

"I know the feeling. When I think about my family and friends I always get a pain in my chest. It hurts when you're away from someone you love."

"Yeah, Toothless and I are the same." Hiccup admitted.

"Who's Toothless?" Jack couldn't help but ask and nearly felt his heart give out when he saw her smile.

"My Dragon that you're psyched about. To others, he's just a Dragon I created. But to me, he's more than that. He's my best friend. He was there for me after I was born and stayed by my side since. He's like my other half; I just can't live without Toothless, even if I did create him he's still my child."

"So, in a way, he's your family." Jack concluded.

"Just like that one creature you made back at the workshop." Hiccup blushed.

"Sorry about that. I get a little defensive when I'm in a familiar place without Toothless."

"Hey, no worries. I was just as bad when I got dragged there."

"What did you do?"

"I froze an elf." Jack grinned at the girl's giggle.

"I think it was Dingle I froze, but I'm not sure."

"Wow. You really know how to make an impression, huh?"

"I can say the same for you. The creature really was an amazing sight." Hiccup looked away hoping Jack wouldn't see her redden face.

Never had anyone called her creations amazing, fascinating and interesting sure. But those Spirits were simply-

'Don't think about them. It won't do you any good if you think about them.'

"Hey, look over there." Hiccup glanced and where Jack was directing his attention.

"It's a Village." A ghost smile formed on her lips.

"That's Berk, home of the descendent Vikings."

"Is this where you were 'born'?" Jack asked in a softer tone and Hiccup shook her head.

"No, I was 'born' in the forest." She sighed.

"I remember that day like it was just yesterday." Her eyes squinted when she saw golden tendrils swarming through the houses.

"What is that?" Jack looks up and beamed.

"Those are Dream Sands from Sandy, they help give children dreams while they sleep through the night. Come on, I'll show you." Jack lowered them down till they are gliding past the houses.

Hiccup was able to see the Dream Sand morph into images above the children's head; small smiles appeared on their lips as their eyes remained unconscious.

Jack landed them on a roof top, and they watched as the sand-dust flew past them.

Curious she ran her hand through the golden sand and watched it form into two butterflies and she let out a cheerful laugh as they fluttered around her.

Jack smiled as he watched the girl play with the butterflies. She looked so happy and carefree, something he normally sees in children. He began to wonder on how some Spirits can grow not to like her, see her as. It seemed like all the Guardians seem to like her and he would be a liar if he said he didn't.

She was special; there was something about her that made Jack want to know more about her. She was different from most of the Spirits, and he could tell he had a habit of keeping to herself.

'I'll have to find a way to break her out of it.'

"Hey, Jack look." Jack snapped, and the two watched as one streamed hovered outside someone's closed window.

"Is that normal?"

"Someone's just up a little late is all, let's check it out." Grabbing Hiccup's hand, they floated over to the window to see who was up at this kind of hour.

As they peered their head to the window, Hiccup saw that it was none other than Lyla who was laying on her stomach and was busying herself in drawing pictures.

A smile formed on her lips as she held up her drawing of a small green dragon to Starfire who was sitting beside her.

"It's way past her bedtime," Hiccup announced as he looked at the homemade clock on the drawer that read ten thirty at night. Hiccup rolled her eyes.

"She usually goes to bed ten minutes before eleven," she told him. Jack looked at her and raised an eyebrow.

"She likes staying up longer than most of the kids, don't ask me why because I have no idea." Hiccup explained; she watched as Lyla stood up and went to her shelf and pulled out a random book off her shelf before heading towards her bed.

The older green eyed girl smiled as; the younger one began to read out loud before turning back to the white haired teen.

"Would you like to see what's she reading?" Jack looked at her.

"How do we do that?"

Hiccup just stayed silent as she placed her palm on the glass and used her other hand to hold Jack's hand. Soon every word Lyla was saying Hiccup began to mimic and soon Jack found himself standing outside a grass field just outside of the castle and watched as Dragons flew above his head and human sized Elves dance around. The girl giggled at Jack's awed face before laying her arms to her side once Lyla drifted off into sleep letting the Dream Sand consume her.

"Hiccup, that was..." Jack trailed off, unable to find the right words to use. Hiccup just smiled and shrugged.

"That's nothing really. You should see Toothless; he would put those Dragons to shame."

"Can you show me to him?" Jack asked with hope and excitement in his voice.

She became hesitant again. Jack seemed harmless, but she wasn't sure how Toothless would react around him, he really hated meeting strangers. Though she couldn't see the problem with her introducing them together.

'Maybe they'll be able to along. They seem like they could be great friends' and Hiccup would give just about anything to see her creations befriend with other people who are interested in them. However, the people always get scared and took off running before they can see the real thing, and Jack here wants to meet Toothless so excitedly made her feel that there is hope after all. Finally after coming to a decision she looked back at Jack and nodded.

"All right, but you have to promise me not to use your ice powers around him. He really hates the cold."

"Really? I thought Dragons loved playing in Winter." Jack joked.

Hiccup wanted to smile, but she reminded herself that she had to stay serious so after giving the frost child a stern look he caved.

"All right fine but I get to freeze his mouth if he tries to roast me."

"Don't worry, Toothless prefers fish meat rather than scrawny boys." She laughed when she heard Jack shout a defensive 'hey' as the two headed into Raven Point.

* * *

>"So, you and Toothless live here?" Jack asked as they walked through the forest.

"Well we did until we found this nice cove and decided to reside there." Hiccup said as she hopped down a rock.

"It sure beat sleeping underneath a sharp bumpy floor."

"I know the feeling. Before I became a Guardian, I use to sleep in a pile of snow or on a tree branch. I still do, but that's only if I'm too lazy to head back to the workshop." Jack said as he hovered above her. Hiccup remained silent before speaking.

"You use to be alone too?"

"Yeah, for three hundred years I was alone with no physical contact of anything or anyone. I tend to avoid Spirits because well I annoyed them a little too much, so they didn't quite enjoy being around me anymore." Jack scoffed as did Hiccup.

"It was rough. Being alone, having to look out for myself but I got through it. Though one could go on for so long without any kind of social contact."

Hiccup looked away. She knew the feeling all too well. Having Spirits and humans alike ignoring her, never once trying to get to see her. The pain was unbearable no matter how much comfort she tried they refused to see her.

"Though, since I joined the Guardians fifty years ago, my life became better. I'm not saying the job in general, but the people there I met." Jack looked at Hiccup, who looked at him.

"It was because of them I was able to find a family."

"... I never knew my real family before I was created." Hiccup admitted.

"Tooth can help you with that, she is the Guardian of Memories." Jack said which made Hiccup perk up a bit.

"And if you like, I can show you around some time and show you other places. You and Toothless, if you guys want to, I mean." Hiccup smiled.

"I-we, would like that." Jack returned the smile as well, feeling happiness warm his frozen heart.

They finally reached the cove as Hiccup led them through a small tunnel before entering their home.

Though Jack could barely see the place, he could that the area he was able to picture out a pool which caused him to have an idea in his head.

'Maybe I could teach her how to ice skate later on.'

"Toothless?" Hiccup called out as she walked through the cove, searching for her Dragon friend.

"Toothless," she tried again before stopping in front of the cave where she heard heavy breathing sound.

"Toothless?" she said softly as she began walking towards the cave trying to see the figure a little better.

Her eyes widen when a Black Sand horse lunge at her before a bolt of ice struck it and froze it in its place. She panted heavily as she stared at the frozen creature.

"What is that thing?" she asked Jack, who lands beside her.

"A Nightmare," Was all he said as he stared long and hard at his frozen creation.

Hiccup, however, began to decipher on what just happen, wondering how this Nightmare had found her cove and then a dark thought corrupted her.

'Where was he? Did those things?... Oh Gods did they take him? Or worse...'

Suddenly last night events began to rush through her head as well as other memories she tried to repress. She could hear several screams until they were all drowned out by Toothless' distressed roar.

'Toothless.' She thought before hearing another ear piercing roar causing her to hold her head in her hands as she shut her eyes tightly.

Jack whipped his head when he saw the girl fall on her knees as she lets out a groan.

"Hiccup, what's wrong?" he asked her as he kneel down beside her.

"Toothless," she whimpered.

"Toothless' gone. I feel him. He's scared. He wants to know where I am. He can't find me. It's so dark, darker than the night, and he's scared; he's scared. I can't, I can't-"

"Hiccup, Hiccup," Jack called out to her as he places a hand on her shoulder.

"He's okay." he tried to assure but she didn't seem to listen as she went on.

"I'm so stupid, I'm so stupid. I got careless and now he's gone. I did this; I let him get hurt. Just like, just like- I'm so sorry, I'm so sorry..." she sobbed as she lowered her head down as her body began to shake and slightly glow "I didn't, I didn't mean it."

"Hiccup. Hic, it's okay." Jack placed both his hands on her shoulders in comfort causing the light to dim down and for her to look up at him with glossy eyes.

"Don't worry. We'll find Toothless." Hiccup sniffled as she rubbed her eyes.

"Y-you will? But you-"

"I may barely know you, but you've known Toothless your entire life so it's only fair that you guys should be together, right?" Jack asked earning a small nod from the girl Spirit.

"Good, now," He stood them both back up to their feet and pulled his arms away.

"We should head back to North."

"But Toothless-"

"It wouldn't be smart if we both went to go look for him without any kind of back up." Hiccup closed her mouth and looked down.

"Hiccup, trust me, the Guardians would want to help you too." Hiccup looked up, her forest green eyes seeming to brighten under the moonlight.

"Why?"

"Because that's what they do." Jack simply said before holding his hand out.

"Now come on, we got a dragon to find."

'And I have a very good idea where he's at.'

Hiccup looked at the offering hand before taking it and soon the two are off into the sky and fly towards North's Workshop.

As they fly away, they didn't know that Pitch was watching them from afar as he smile sinisterly as his mind formed his master plan.

"Don't worry, my pet" he was talking about Hiccup as he held out his open hand as his Black Sand formed a tiny Hiccup.

"Soon, you and I shall conquer everythingâ€¦together!" he said and let out a menacing laugh that echo through the cove and this time Pitch Black will make sure he will come out victorious, and the Guardians will fall and Jack Frost will woe in fear and despair forever. And then Nightmare King retreat back to his Lair.

While the Guardians and Hiccup are unaware of the phenomenon that is soon to come.

* * *

>Okay, done! And I will update chapter 5 soon, guys. I'll see you all next time on Believe is Seeing.

5. Forgive me & Reasons

Dear Readers.

It is I, your faithful friend, Pen-Woman is here to speak to ease all your fear and concern.

I did NOT, I repeat, did NOT nor willing to abandon my stories. They are my wonderful works I practically pour my mind, heart, and soul into my stories as if they were my children. Forgive me for not answering any of your worry-filled comments, but I will tell you my reasons is to why I delayed my babies.

First off, I had a job like anyone have, but my work has given me nothing, but turn me into a nerve-wrecking ball. It was nothing like my last job, this job that I spent almost half a year nearly made me sick, not the kind of 'I'm sick of it' but I was really ill.

My stomach has turn into a clinic for so many meds I take for my stomach pain that comes day in and day out. every once in a while I go to my doctor for check-up, and he believes that I just relax and take it easy, but I can't all because of my boss.

When I first start my 2nd job it was O.K, I was completely good doing my work...until, of course, I saw the true color of this job. My boss has shown no appreciation or gratitude as I was trying my very best to please her, but it made me so frustrated that it gives me a headache. My boss blames stuff I didn't do, and even sometimes put me on a guilt trip for the stuff which I didn't do is broken.

When I finally had it I told my boss I quit for not feeling appreciated of my work. I signed my papers, took my monthly salary, and I left without looking back.

As you can see that's why I didn't have much time to write to anything, but now I'm free and happy I can go back to the one thing I love to work and feeling appreciated right here...and my cooking
^^

So now that you all know, I will get back to work, and thank you so much that you guys, haven't given up on me. Love you all.

6. The Big Four's Horrendous Decision

The Big Four's Horrendous Decision

"Talking"

'Talking in Thought'

"YELLING"

'YELLING IN THOUGHT'

Flashback

Doubts

Doubtâ€|this word alone could block any logic or truth like a wall, it'll allow you think irrationally, it'll blacken your mind and not listen to your heart.

Doubt can lie. Doubt can make you ignorant. Doubt can make you blind and deaf. Doubt will make you weakâ€|and aloneâ€|.by Pen-Woman.

Disclaimer: I do not own Rise of the Guardians or How to Train Your Dragon because they're all belong to DreamWorks.

* * *

>Things have become quiet in North's Workshop beside the sound of toys making and ding-a-ling bells from the Elves, but they work their creation peacefully since Jack left with Hiccup.

However, the Big Four don't seem well relaxed in busy Workshop, they each held a cloud of doubts above of their heads after learning Hiccup's dangerous power of hers and her past event.

Tooth and Sandy felt sad that this kind and sweet girl Spirit is the rumored Spirit who controls most feared creatures known to humanity. They were surprised, she wasn't what they pictured of the rumored Spirit, they pictured like she's evil with wicked smile that she enjoy tormenting innocent souls. But after they met her and how polite and kind she is to the older Guardians, she even apologized for her tempered behavior that she lashed out at North and Bunny so she couldn't be the one who terrorized humans and Spirits using her monsters. There is something wrong with this picture here.

Toothiana, the Guardian of Memories let out a tired sigh before she look up to see her friends all looking tenseâ€|well, most of them. Sandy went for a quick snooze fifteen minutes ago. She ordered her Fairies to go pick up some loosed tooth leaving her and Baby Tooth in the Workshop. Baby Tooth insists on staying with her Mother and to wait for Jack and pretty girl, she liked Hiccup so she isn't bad. Bunnymund supported himself on the column while he spin his boomerang using his trained paw, a habit she know too well that Bunny is both troubled and worried and he let out his frustration through his weapon. North haven't moved from the Nerve Center since he sent Phil and the other Yeti to seek information about Hiccup Tale, his body stood like a stone as his eyes locked on the Globe of Belief.

As she watched her friends she couldn't help but to think what Bunny had said "_All I'm saying is I'm not so sure if Manny made the right choice about giving a girl like her such a dangerous power._"

Did Manny really made a wrong choice? Did he chose Hiccup by mistake he made? No, Manny is the wisest Spirit of all and he never ever made any kind of mistake. He always make a right choices, he maybe a mysterious Spirit never understood what he is thinking or why. But at the end he is always been right about everything like he was right when he chose Jack Frost as new Guardian fifty years ago, if it weren't for his help she nor her Guardians could stop Pitch from dominating the world with his fear. He would have been victorious if Jack hadn't saved the Last Light's belief because of Jack and Jamie they both restored belief from the children brighter and stronger than they ever been.

So she has to believe in Manny's wisdom and in Hiccup because there is no way Hiccup could be evil as rumored say. Tooth flapped her Fairy wing and zoomed right into Bunny's face causing him to make a startling yelp and dropped his boomerang.

"I don't believe you," She exclaimed and Bunny blinked three times.

"I beg your pardon?"

"That's your wrong about Hiccup." She exclaimed, causing Sandy to wake up and looking around groggily.

"How could you compare a sweet, innocent girl like Hiccup who by the way compliments me and my Fairies," she said and Baby Tooth, who hovers right next to her, squeaked and nodded in agreement.

"To a bringer of destruction and chaos, who deliver fear in heart of mankind and Spirits, and her monsters are like nothing we've seen before are as terrible as their evil creator is," Tooth spoke so fast, trying prove her point that Hiccup isn't evil as everyone thought she is but she just made her reputation worse. Bunny stare at her like she have grown a second head, Sandy look deadpanned, and Baby Tooth look at her Mother with her mouth wide open before she slapped her forehead. When Tooth finally realized what she said, she begin to splutter.

"Oh gosh, that's didn't come out right." She nervously bit her nail before she righted herself.

"The point to all this that she is not the same girl from the rumor,"

"I'm afraid, you're mistaken, Toothiana." A new voice startle the Big Four and all four head turn to face a newcomer with Phil and the other Yeti, they've return and they've brought a Sprite.

They know him, he call himself Timothy the Summer Sprite like Jack, but he controls heat and fire at his will and maker of Summer Break and most popular guy by everyone. He dressed in tight blue jeans, and long-sleeved black shirt with white fire pattern coming from his right shoulder to his chest.

After he heard from Phil he asked to meet the Guardians as fast as he could to tell all about Hiccup Tale.

"Tim-boy, what a surprise?" said North, it was indeed a surprise to see the bringer of Summer here in his Workshop.

"It's good to see you too, North." He said coolly before he damped into forlorn.

"Although, I wish this visit could turn pleasant if it weren't forâ€¦_that_," They all stayed in silence till Aster broke the silence.

"You know anything about Hiccup, mate?" when he asked it made Tim shiver coldly.

"Know?! I saw _everything_ right before my eyes, close enough that I feel like I died all over again," he never forget, no one could forget when the encounter her and her beasts.

"It happened so long ago, and I still remember it and it wasâ€¦no right words can express how horrifying it was, like the Dark Age." The images in his head sprung back to full force made him choke, but he had to show them what he saw. He twirl his wrist as his fingers dances and then fire sprung to life following his fingers obediently.

"Nobody knows who she is or what she is but one we do know one thingâ€¦that she is here to harm anyone who come across her way," then his fire formed a figure of Hiccup in fiery form then the fire formed into some Dragon, standing right next to her.

"What is that?" North spoke first when he see a small Dragon.

"It's one of her beast and the most powerful of her creation, he never left her side at all." Then it pondered the Big Four, they didn't see a Dragon with her when she's here and wondered where it at.

"Pig's arse!" Bunny exclaimed after seeing the fiery image of her Dragon.

"He doesn't look tough, I can't take him on with my hands tied around my back." Bunny added in confident and Tim said cause his fur to stick up.

"Don't be fooled by his size, like I said it's one of her _most_ powerful beast she ever created and happened to be her first beast. The People had dubbed him the Night Fury, unholy offspring of lightning and death itself. Never engage this Dragon, you're only chance is to hide and pray does not find you." He look up and see the heroes of childhood paler than Jack as they sink a disturbing information, but Tim wasn't finish.

"If you think this thing is scary, you should see the others," then his fire deformed and reform into another figure of beast that roars that can make your ears bleed.

"She produced more Dragon that as fearsome and petrifying as her first Dragon, each customized with their deadly powers. Like one can light fire around his body, one can launch deadly spikes, one can eat rocks and fire a molten ball, and there are even a type that can launch concussive sound that could kill a man in close range," he shook that feeling before he continue.

"And that's not all, she creates Minotaur, Kraken, Hydra, Leviathan, Cyclops, Chimera, she can create anything just by picturing in her head and summon them from inside of her and attack without giving you a second chance to counter attack." With that Timothy ended, closing his hand and the fire die down and choking silence welcomed them in cold embrace.

Never in their lifetime has felt a cold chill right to their bones, Hiccup, sad to say that their hope for Hiccup died from the moment they heard Timothy's story of Hiccup. But that doesn't make sense, why would Manny the great and wise Spirit give this girl such terrifying powers and most of all why did he choose her as Guardian? Did Manny make mistake? Did he make a wrong choice? All dark question filled their minds giving them a headache.

Timothy sees and said enough and he turn away to return home but not before he say one last thing.

"You know, it boggled my mind that Man in Moon reborn someone so evil that would harm the children of the world," hearing him say causing North to retaliate.

"No, I know Manny like you know Manny! He never intentionally do something like this. Manny is the wisest Spirit of us all and the kindest, he cares for the children like they're his own and he never make mistakes." North exclaimed, defending his longtime friend while Tim didn't replay right away. Tim stay with his back facing North before he turn around and look at him in dead seriousness and a sorry look.

"Have you forgotten? What he did 500 years ago?" he said, as North stood rigid and paled, along with Guardians, Bunny's fur and Tooth's feather stood up as Sandy look down looking dejectedly after mentioning the past they wish to erase, the past that still hunt them in their sleep, the past of mistake and catastrophe that happened on that era, the era of the Dark Age.

Tim notice the heavy atmosphere that he regretted a bit for bringing up the past, but they need to be reminded the situation they are in and what need to be done and this time they need to do it right before it's too late, or they will face the same taste of failure all over again, he sigh through his nose and spoke again.

"I better go home now, sorry for highlighting the past but, you guys, need to do what is right. The last thing you guys need is a second mistake." After he said it, he flies away to the open window and disappeared through the sky till he's nothing but a dot.

Another heavy and upsetting silence overcome around the Big Four, their body are fatigued with dejection, and the outcome they feared has come upon them and present them with extreme decision that they made, they wanted to give the little Hiccup a chance that she could be a good person, but the odds of seeing in her good has went down the drain.

Toothiana is sadden with Hiccup to many things, she can't become a Guardians with bad history, and Manny has made the same mistake again. She had hoped that Manny would never commit it again and look how wrong she is. She look at her friends with defeated look and said.

"Soâ€|what now?" they reacted by giving her their sad glance of their own and North answer to her.

"First, we must stop Pitch's plot, that's important." He conceded.

"â€|And Hiccup, what's going to happen to her?" Tooth asked again and Bunny replay grimly.

"We have no choice but to do drastic measures,"

"But, we can't beat Pitch without her!" she resorted.

"We'll be in danger when she's around or worse, putting the ankle biters in harm's way, we can't take that risk." Then Bunnymund turn to face North with his back on him and shoulder slumped and spoke to him.

"North, it need to be done before it get out of hands," his tone is dead serious as sharp as a knife, North turn to gaze at his furry friend blankly before he change his blank expression to seriousness.

"You're right, friend! But this conversation that happen has never happen and as for Hiccupâ€|we need her to stop Pitch first and right after foiling Pitch's plan, weâ€|" North hated this, using her as a tool to stop Pitch but what choice do he have.

"And after she beat Pitch, we will use Magic Abstraction to remove her powersâ€|for good." He yield to his idea and the rest agree. Then Sandy had an exclamation mark of sand formed on top of his head, then he waved thus earning the Guardian's attention, he start to form a symbol of snowflake of sand floating down gently, Tooth gasp for realizing it.

"Oh my, did Jack know aboutâ€|this?"

"No, he doesn't" answered Bunny.

"But, should we let him know about her I mean it isn't right to leave him in the dark." Before Bunny can answer to her when sudden bang of the window startling the Guardians, they look up and speak of the devil, Jack's here.

"Guys, we got a problem!" Jack exclaimed before he landed on the ground with his hand holding Hiccup as he gently put her on the ground safely and the Big Four become tensed at her presence.

"Pitch's Nightmare was in Hiccup's home!" the Guardians are in high alert when he mention of him.

"What?! How?" Bunny asked.

"I don't know, but he's really keen on capturing Hiccup." He hinted with anger and disgust, what would Pitch going to do if he lay his filthy on Hiccup. God forbid if he let him touch a strand of her hair, he'll freeze him into an ice-cube before he can touch her. He was caught off guard when he made a promising statement in his head and feeling a rush of hot blood swarming under his cheeks, he was suddenly became protective of her when they only met for like hours ago but still he will let Pitch get to her.

"But why? What does he want from me?" Hiccup asked confusedly.

"And who is Pitch?" a chord of toy dropped and cookie platter broke who were near to hear her say and again she was embarrassed to see everyone are looking at her weirdly. Jack gaped till he realizes that she hasn't made contact with outside world in long, long time.

"Okay, Pitch is all evil, the Nightmare King aka the Boogeyman! Occupation: inflecting fear, destroy children's belief in us, ruling the world, you know evil's basis." He goes and act like he's lecturing to his student.

"We beat Pitch fifty years ago and now he's back which he's not supposed to till he has somehow regained full power and he has a new evil plot which we don't know yet and you became Pitch's new toy to play with." He said ever so bluntly that the rest of his Guardian friend almost face palmed, talk about a whole new level of direct by standard.

Hiccup's geared up as it absorb all the words like sponge absorbing water and then her brain ringed when Jack mentioned her.

"Whoa, whoa, whoa—|whoa, hold up for one second I don't if I heard it right but did you say I'm Pitch's new toy!?" she said slowly if she what she heard was right. Jack bit his lips before he answered.

"Yep"

"Yep? Yep!? That's all you can provide for me. That's just fantastic." She moves her arms around and turning away from Jack and the Guardians as she starts to ramble.

"It's bad enough I get forced in to be part of help community but now I have a Boogeyman is after my tail for his evil master plan that no one knows yet! Why? Why does it _always_ happen to me!? Is it too much to ask to leave me alone in peace?" she brings her hands to her face, sliding it from up to her chin as her mind jumble with annoying, troubled thoughts.

She thinks too damn much that it giving her the worse margarine. She spent 200 years all by herself with only her imaginary creatures are her only friends she can trust and avoiding any Sprites that get too close for comfort and hide before anyone knew she was there. She shunned herself from the world and she was happy about it and now in some sick twist of irony she was discovered by the Guardians which is worse, her best friend Toothless is dragonapped, and now this Pitch character is coming for her. This is not her day.

It would seem that her hiding days are over and now she have matters that more important, Toothless. Her Toothless is with Boogeyman right now and she can feel he is scared. Her link with Toothless is faint but strong enough to sense his distress roar for her and low growl of fright as darkness creeping up on him from everywhere.

He wants to get out, he wants to be free, and he needs her. Hiccup knows now what she must do she must get to Toothless before anything bad happen to him if he stays any longer. But, she has no idea where the Boogeyman is. That's when her brain gave her the answer and that is the Guardians, they fought Pitch before so they probably know where his lair is. She still have an issue to trust the elder Guardians while Jack just a bit but will she put her trust in Jack and the Guardians to help her find Toothless after 200 years of isolation and wariness, but what other choice? She'll loses Toothless if she doesn't get help from them. With heavy decision she turn to face them.

The Guardians who were watching Hiccup struggling with herself before she turn to face them with frown but serious expression.

"I don't know what's going on here anymore and I certainly don't know why it's happening to me, but I have no one to turn into." Then her expression changed into pleading.

"Pitch Black has my friend captive and he is very dear to me. Please, help me get my friend back?" she clenched her hands tightly till her knuckles turn white as she stares at the Guardians pleadingly.

The Big Four looked at the girl spirit pitifully and yet they are unsure after hearing from Tim-boy's story of her. However, Jack will help agreeably, he know that Hiccup's Dragon friend mean so much to her and she is terribly worried for his safety. He understood her feeling very well because he too felt that way before. It's when he and Baby Tooth were on their own to save the captured Fairies in Pitch's lair but they soon realized they can't fly because their children's belief in them has extinguished. All but one remaining light stay shining in blackest of nights from young Jamie Bennett.

If it weren't little Jamie the Guardians and Jack would have lost and Pitch would rule the world with fear, this little light had helped lit other lights to foil Pitch's plan for good. Jack and Jamie had become best friend afterward or better close to brothers. Jack love Jamie dearly and would do anything to keep his little buddy safe and forever.

Although, forever did not favor for the hopeful Jack Frost for he saw the dreading thing that broke his frozen heart. Little Jamie Bennett is no longer little anymore he grown up and despite he hold his belief on the Guardians and Jack but his childhood sight has been lost from long ago and cannot see Jack anymore.

It tore their hearts since that day but Jack saw Jamie smile, a smile that's not sad or fake but it seems sincere and genuine and Jack knew what he meant that no matter the distance or time their friendship and brotherhood would stay strong like the light that shine away the darkness like melted ice.

As he keeps thinking of him and Jamie on how his friendship are the same as Hiccup with her Dragon who she cherished this creature with all her heart, and it pain him to see her this way with desperation and sorrow. So, Jack step up and spoke with determination.

"Don't worry, we'll get your friend back." The Guardians all look at Jack as if he had grown a second head, but Hiccup, however, look at him with relief and joy.

Just she about to thank him when all of sudden an alarm went on very loud, alerting an intruder is approaching.

"Bellamy! What is that!?" said Aster in shock. North push through to see what's going on his Globe.

"It's my new security alarm I installed right after we defeated Pitch for any unwanted guests, and by the looks of it our unwanted guests are coming close and coming fast." North exclaimed and spoke one Yeti next to him in Russian, the Yeti complied by pressing a few keys and then sooner later a light blue screen appeared before the Guardians, Jack, and Hiccup and they flinch when they saw an army of black sand Nightmares.

"Uh oh! Not good." North commented.

"Not good!? That's all you can say, mate. There probably hundreds or thousands of them coming to tear your precious Workshop into dust and all you can say not good. Unbelievable, I can't possibly think of what could be worse than this?" Aster ranted as he stomp furiously.

Then the alarm suddenly went on even louder than the last and another screen appeared of what looks like the Warren is infested with Nightmares, and then a third screen appeared of Tooth's castle and it's also been attacked by Nightmares. Aster let his ears down and narrowed his eyes.

"Me and my big furry mouth." He said with deadpan tone.

"Alright," North exclaimed putting on his leadership mode when trouble is around, and he must act and think quick before they wreck their realm like last time.

"Listen up, we split into teams, two pair in one group this way will stop the Nightmares and save our homes at the same time. We cannot let Pitch have his way." Jack silently growled as silently curse at Pitch's cowardly move using his black horse minions to do his dirty work and wreak havoc on his friends' home. He'll make sure that Pitch will not have his way like last time when he ruined Easter and attacked Aster's decorated eggs or he stole Tooth's Tooth Fairies and the children's memories to destroy their belief in the Tooth Fairy.

Well, now he's here Pitch will better think twice of ever doing it again and most importantly, Hiccup. He looks at the brunette wearing worried expression on her face as she looks at the screens, but he can see fear in her green eyes probably remembering the attacks from the Nightmares twice, but most of all, all she worried about is her missing Dragon friend that still held captive with Pitch. He promised her that he would help her find her Dragon by getting to the Guardians to help out, but now his rescue mission will have postpone for now and then he and his Guardians will rescue Hiccup's friend.

Suddenly, Sandy hold his arms up and wave to draw their attention and once he got their notice he talk to them using his magical golden sands. He first form a number four and letter G which looks like the symbol on the cover from the Book of Guardian.

Then he shows them by forming five figures of North, Aster, Tooth, Jack, and himself. He then adds three forms of the Guardian's homes the Warren, North's Workshop, and Tooth's Castle. He waits for his friend to get what he's trying to say, the Guardians process what Sandy is saying till they clicked in realization.

They're only five of them and three realms if they split into two groups that could only mean that one must fight the Nightmare alone while the rest fight.

"Ðž Ð½ÐµÑ, ! This is terrible we can't have one versus hordes of Nightmares it's too much of a risk." North begin to mumble and curse in Russian as he tries to come up with a plan, any plan to save their home from getting raid.

Just when there is no other alternative a hand been risen up catching everyone's attention, they stare to see it was Hiccup the Spirit girl raised her hand to got their attention, she clears her throat, and said.

"I can help I may not look like it, but I can fight. Those things have my friend captive; please let me in the fight I promise I won't be a hindrance to anyone."

North, Tooth, Aster, and Sandy are in a spot of trouble now. They are not so sure or better yet can trust in the girl to be put in a battle with Nightmares and fearing she could unleash her devastating power, they can't allow that but Pitch's armies are gaining closer and about to do lay waste on their homes if they don't do something.

"That's a great idea" Jack exclaimed alerting everyone and he glide over till he is right next to her and he adds.

"She can be a great help, I saw her powers and it was amazing, and she can team up with me, great idea, huh?" he enthusiastically said.

They don't think 'great' is the right word for it, the word they're looking for is recklessly, and stupidly bad idea.

But, they are running out of time and they must act quickly before it gets out of control like losing the children's belief again. North sigh tiredly, he guessed he have no other choice, for now, he must put his trust on Hiccup before he and his Guardian friends announce their decision.

"Alright, Jack will team up with Hiccup and use my Snow Globe to take you to the Warren." North command it and Aster start to protest.

"Wait, what!? No, no, wait they can'tâ€|" North silences him by shaking his head, signaling him to not say a word and glancing now and then with his blue eyes at the unsuspecting Hiccup who she is busy talking with Jack.

She mustn't know yet, and neither is Jack since he seems bonded with the brunette girl.

"Ok, no more time. We must go now, now. Everyone take your partner and go!" North exclaimed as Aster stood by his side to help him protect his Workshop from those invading pests.

Sandy throws his magical Snow Globe as the rainbow swirling vortex appears and he and Tooth fly through to Tooth's Palace. That leaves Hiccup and Jack who he is holding the Snow Globe that he took from North and whispers one word to the small magic glass ball.

"Warren." With one single word of a place the Snow Globe from inside start to take form a place of Warren, and Jack throws the Snow Globe and the magical vortex seem right before them.

Hiccup was put on by awe spell as she marvels at the colorful vortex. She was soon snapped out of the daze when something took hold of her hand, she looks down to see a big hand covers her petit hand before she looks up to the hand's owner. Jack knowing smirk with eyes twinkle with mischief.

"Are you all set for grade A, unsurpassed ride of your life?" Hiccup is her turn to put on her sly smirk.

"Please, I've been riding on Toothless, fastest Dragon I've created since day one, and this 'pff' it'll be easy as milking a Yak." She remarked.

"Okay, first off milking a Yak, gross. Second, lady's first." He bows to her to go first and Hiccup, without moment of hesitation she jumped through the swirling vortex with whooping cheer, followed by Jack Frost.

They have reached their destination after and Hiccup could not help herself but to let her lower lip drop down at the beautiful sight.

She have seen many beautiful places, she visits tropical forests, and fallen breathtaking ruins. But this, it left her wordless.

The Warren is an incredible green-spring oasis filled with bright-shined color leaves, egg stoned sculptors scattered all over the place and ancient temples that she never crosses her mind she sees something in here.

Jack Frost noticed the girl's admiration of this place made his cold heart fonder, the way she smiles brighten her face, and her eyes areâ€|enhance to brilliant green glow.

He can't think of anything else besidesâ€|she is truly breathtaking.

"â€|Ackâ€|JACK!"

"Huh? What, what?" he snapped out of his dreamy state and stare up at Hiccup who look at him with obvious worry.

"Are you okay?"

"Uh yes, yes I'mâ€|I'm perfectly fine." He said fast and keeps his thought about her locked tight, now if he only can lock that stupid blush on his face. Hiccup sees his blush thought he's sick or something.

"Are you sure? Your face is turningâ€|purpleâ€|" she is not sure of what she said, but that's what she sees.

Jack is confused for only two second till he gets what she meant, he is different from other Spirits like, right now, when he blushes his face turn into a shade of purple instead of red. Others might have think that looks like frostbite, but he is really blushing.

"Ohâ€|that's, that's probably just the weather in the Warren. You know, I'm Winter and this heat, hehe." He lied, he lied real lousy but that all he can come up with.

Hiccup look at him strangely and really buying it, and just when she opens her mouth to speak when they hear a screeching neigh from the sky, and they both look up in alarm.

Dozen upon dozen of Nightmares are dashing on air, in perfect row and ready to plunder Warren to dust.

Jack silently thank from above that stopped Hiccup from what she is about to say, but he may be thankful to those four-legged freaks he still needs to get rid of them before they turn Warren into war zone.

"Hey, ready to bash some Nightmares?" he smirks at her direction while he spins his staff casually.

Hiccup stops staring at the incoming horde of Nightmare and look at the smugly smirk of Jack, and she in return smirk back with equal the smug.

"As you already know I have raw Viking-ness locked up deep inside me, and now it's bursting with power. I was born and reborn ready!" she takes pride on herself as she puffs up her chest, her hands on her hips, and testing Jack.

Jack is unamused by her gloat, nevertheless he still has his smirk on as he brings his staff to a halt and pointing at the Nightmares while he keeps his gaze firm on Hiccup.

"Whoever beat the most Nightmares wins. May be the best wins, which clears is I am!" he gloats back at Hiccup while she rolls her green eyes.

"Well sorry to tell you this but," She gets too close to his face that Jack's blush is returning ten times fold.

He gulps as he takes the time to stare her face up-close, her green eyes of emerald gems clash at his icy-blues as he commented in the back of his mind that she is more beautiful up-close. Her complexion is fine and smooth, probably soft to the touch that he resist himself from caressing her, his heart is pounding so hard it hurts, his legs feels like they are melting like ice, and he was so glad that the Guardians aren't here because if they are they'll never stop teasing him. He was snapped out again when Hiccup speaks.

"I got news flash for you, I'm gonna win!" and before Jack can say anything back Hiccup is already sprinting to action, and making Jack snap back to reality and fly after her.

The Nightmares have landed and ready to bring plunder upon this spring land but one of them got shot turning it into an ice statue. They all turn to find their annoying enemy Jack Frost and a brunette with him, they neigh and charge at them.

Jack had his staff aim straight at the Nightmares when he realizes that Hiccup has no weapon or anything to defend herself!?

"Wait a sec, HIC! How are you going to fight them? With your bare hands!" he yells in little worry, but Hiccup didn't avert her sight from the upcoming Nightmares but she smirks smugly and replied.

"Just don't blink, Frostbutt or you'll miss the whole thing." Before Jack can retort back at her when suddenly her body start to glow green and before Jack knew Hiccup has summoned vast numbers of Pegasus and Unicorns all neighing like battle cry and charge at the evil Nightmares.

Then they clash at each other in all out hoof-stomping battle royal of Pegasus, Unicorns and Nightmare. Jack ceased when he the summoning and watching the coolest battle ever, Hiccup walk up till she's next to him and still has that smirk on her face.

Then Jack began to laugh excessively at an awesome battle ever. The Pegasus are battling on air as they clash at the Nightmares with speed that surpasses those jet black horses and their hooves are like made of steel as they vanquishing the Nightmare with ease as they reduced to sands, and the Unicorns who have been heard in stories that they are gentle beings but if you mess with one you'll get the horns accurately. Their horns are sharper than the actual blades that can pierce through almost anything like they are doing right now are charging and stabbing the Nightmares just like that.

Jack and Hiccup are plainly watching on the sideline when Jack spoke up.

"I gotta admit thatâ€¦you took the cool category to whole new level." He praised her as Hiccup bow before him.

"Thank you, thank you!"

"But," then his change of tune made Hiccup to look up questionably and notices the all-knowing smirk with smug face that he has something to make things more interesting for his favor.

"There's one thing you gotta know, Hic. I am the king of all things cool!" then he flies over to the battle field and start freezing the Nightmares. Hiccup blinked once before she grins, shake her head and join in the fun.

Jack start to leave a trail of ice as he flies and the Nightmares have been regrettably fallen for such a simple trick as soon as three Nightmares touch on ice they start to slide as they neigh in alarm as the icy slide lead them straight to a big rock, and when they see it they gasp and crashed into the rock and Jack laugh at their stupidity for falling into a simple trick.

Hiccup found herself surrounded by Nightmares all circling around her prevent her from escaping and got her where they want her since their Master wants her. But Hiccup is not all worried, in fact she looks bored.

"Oh my I am trapped." She said mockingly.

"Oh whatever shall I do? I'm completely defenselessâ€|or do I?" as she said it she started to glow in light blue.

A bright blue glow is forming from her right hand till it shows its full glory that made all Nightmares flinch. The Nightmares thought she'll summon another creature but to their surprise it wasn't a Mystical creature but by all mean they are in worse of trouble now.

Holding in her hand is the mighty sword known throughout the ancient history who believed are but legend, but it is not legend anymore when she holds the all-powerful Excalibur.

With heave she swings the powerful blade and ring of light vanquished the Nightmares into dust. She wooed as she blow her fringe that concealed her sigh, she mumbles something under her breath before she turn to find Jack was staring at her in utter bewilderment meaning he saw the whole thing and it render the Frost Spirit speechless. She smirked as smug as she gloats.

"I totally win it." That snapped out of Jack's shock and replied right back.

"Not yet, there is still more when that came from!" he then in turn show her what he really made by spinning his staff in fast circle motion right on top of him and what he did that he calls a swirling blizzard and he unleashed upon the terrified Nightmares.

The Nightmares try to run away from the blizzard but all was unlucky for them as one after another they all sucked in and they are mercilessly spinning like crazy till they are no more than a speck of snow dust.

After Jack see that every last of Nightmares are now beaten he ceases the blizzard and gives himself a silent pat on the back. Yep, Jack is still king of all things cool and he haven't lost his touch, he swiftly turn to face an all-shocked Hiccup look around her in look of bafflement.

"Looks to me that I'm clearly the winner!" He mockingly laughs but what Jack didn't know that Hiccup wasn't baffled by his powers but she was actually more vexed.

"Uh! I don't wanna to spoil your victory but you might wanna take a double-check." She said it.

Jack confused at first before he looks around, nothing seem to be wrongâ€|Uh Oh!?

Jack has just frozen over Warren land into icy wonderland from his blizzard attack, the once breezy spring with greens and flowers are now winter, and Bunny is going to go berserk.

"Uh, you don't thinkâ€¦Mr. Bunnymund will be mad after all of this, do you?" she sounds her anxious worry that Aster will be very upset; Jack forced a smile on his face.

"Uh no, no, he won't get mad."

'Nope, he's going to turn into a fur ball of red fury and he will use his boomerang ram where he never rammed me before.' He gulped from his mental image but shook it off he doesn't want Hiccup to be scared now.

"Don't worry about it, besides on positive side we beat those dust bunnies till nothing but 'uh' dust." Her nervousness seems to sweep away thanks to Jack's reassurance.

"Yeah, I guess you'reâ€¦" before she can finish her sentence her foot caught a slippery ice and it causes her to slide across unbalanced and she can't get to stop.

"Hiccup! Watch out!" Jack quickly and without warning he caught her around her waist and Hiccup had her arms draped around his shoulders.

They are so close, so close that it took their breath away. Eyes locked, lips are inches away, their breathing joined together, and their bodies fit together like a missing puzzle.

Jack is never feel this sort of close contact like this, well besides North giving him a good pat, Tooth's hugs, Bunny's shoulder punch, or Sandy's patting him in the shoulder. But this is soâ€¦different, a good different as he took the time to study her very carefully like as if he met her for the first time.

She never ceases to amaze Jack and it's not from the powers she possesses but she is something special. She is strong at heart, kindred spirit, smart, and so much more, and he feels himself smiling without him realizing.

Hiccup feel paralyzed right under Jack's blue eyes and that smileâ€¦it's new to her, it's not the smugly smirk nor that playful grin but this smile he's wearing she feels herself lighter like nothing when she's flying on Toothless. No, it's something like you were grounded from the very long time of a fate she wished nothing to be part of, and he alone somehow made them fade away and she can only see him and only him likeâ€¦magic, wonderful magic.

She too smiles but shyly upon Jack.

Jack held on to his smile and feel gravity pull his face for some unknown reason that heâ€¦really wanted to get closer, much closer, and Hiccup just stood there as her face turning red by the second.

'Is heâ€¦wait? Is he going toâ€¦?!'

A terrifying neigh shattered this moment and causing the two teen to turn and look up and to find one remaining Nightmare right on top of the hill and dashed forward so fast and knocked Jack off the ground.

"JACK!" Hiccup was going to get to him when the Nightmare halted her by turning itself into dust and swirl around Hiccup.

She feels something is not right and she is scared out of her wits and she is sinkingâ€|WAIT! Sinking? She looks down and to her terror she is sinking into black quick sand by the Nightmare. She tries to move but the more she struggles, the deeper she goes.

"JACK! JACK, HELP ME."

Jack snapped wide awake and to find Hiccup is descending to the black quick sand with half of hers is gone under.

"JACK!" she screamed in fear.

"HICCUP!" he flies over to her to rescue her but to his worst nightmare the quick sand has quicken its way and pulled Hiccup down with her screaming and she is gone.

"NOOOOOOOO!" she is gone, gone to where he tries prevented from happening, to Pitch Black.

* * *

>Whew! Never meant it to take this long but here it is I hope you guys like it and see you all next time on Believe is Seeing.

End
file.